Two Battles Halt Bloody Prison Break

WARDEN SLAIN BY OKLAHOMA DESPERADOES

Hard-Shooting Deputy Kills Two, Wounds Third and Captures Fourth.

GOVERNOR INVESTIGATES

Pays Tribute To Officer, Says His Action Saved Lives of Civilians.

(By United Press)

McALESTER, Okla.—Gov. Leon Phillips, investigating the bloodiest break in the history of the Oklahoma penitentiary, today praised W. E. Alexander, 45, a bald and rotund deputy sheriff, who singlehandedly killed two fugitives, critically wounded another and captured the fourth.

The escaping convicts killed Warden Jess Dunn, 46, and County Jailer W. B. Ford, 51.

"I personally paid tribute to Bill Alexander," Phillips, who questioned guards and convicts, said. "Probably Alexander saved the lives of other citizens by stopping the convicts when he did, instead of letting them run away and terrorize the countryside."

Alexander fought two gun battles with the fugitives. In the first, he killed Claude Beavers, 39, who drove the automobile in which they fled.

In the second battle, half a mile from the first, he killed Roy McGee, 36, and shot William Anderson, 35, serving 27 years for armed robbery, through the stomach. The fourth fugitive Hiram Prather, 33, a murderer and life-termer, threw down his gun and crawled from the ditch in which they had taken refuge, begging for mercy.

Alexander and Ford, warned of the escape by prison sirens, leaped into an automobile and, at the prison gates picked up Robert Pollock, a guard.

They cornered the convicts on a dead-end road, and Alexander jumped out with his rifle ready.

The convicts started shooting. A blast from the convict's shotgun killed ford. Alexander fatally wounded Beavers and wounded McGee, but he had emptied

26 INJURED IN MISHAPS HERE; 20 DIE IN OHIO

Ten Hurt In One Accident on Route 42 Near Johnsville Sunday Afternoon.

THREE IN HOSPITAL

Occupants of Two Cars Hurt After They Collide, Skid Into Another Vehicle.

Twenty-six persons were injured none seriously, in the Mansfield area during a week-end which brought death to 20 persons in traffic accidents throughout Ohio.

Ten persons were injured in a three-car collision a mile and a half south of Johnsville on U. S. Route 42 yesterday at 1:30 p. m.

State highway patrolmen said that an auto driven by Noah Fraley, 35, Butler R. D. 2, collided with another operated by DelRoy Hout, 257 Rowland avenue, after passing an unidentified motorist following the collision. Hout's car skidded across the road into the path of a fourth automobile driven by Lewis LaCivita, 23, of Youngstown.

All occupants of the Fraley and Hout cars were injured but those in the La Civita car escaped. All were treated at General hospital but only three were admitted as patients.

Most seriously hurt were Noah Fraley, who suffered a fractured left arm, cuts and bruises, Hugh Hout, 42, Mansfield R. D. 2, fractured right leg; and Mrs. Robert Hout, 31, of 257 Rowland avenue, severe lacerations about the left ear and head.

Also injured in the crash were: Myrtle Crawford, Mt. Gilead, R. D. 2; Hattie Fraley, 33, Butler, R. D. 2; Lafe Lee Fraley, 3, same address, all riding with Fraley; DelRoy Hout and Marion Hout, 39, Mansfield, R. D. 4, all of whom suffered lacerations and bruises about the head, shoulders and arms.

Prepare for 'Firm' Action From America

BULLETIN

TOKYO—(INS)—Foreshadowing possibly important developments, the British and American ambassadors to Japan returned to Tokyo almost simultaneously today from the countryside.

(By United Press)

TOKYO—Japan girded for war on the economic front today as the press reported the United States "prepared with resolution" to face any emergency arising in the Pacific.

The increasing strain of diplomatic and economic tug-of-war in the Far East was indicated in developments on a vast front from Siberia to the Dutch East Indies, including:

1—Approval of four ordinances to the general Japanese mobilization act designed to shift the nation economically and financially to a full war footing.

2—A statement by Kaname Wakasugi, Japanese minister to Washington who is now in Los Angeles, that the United States was much concerned regarding the future position of Thailand and that Americans "seem prepared with resolution" after arranging to enforce "step by step all counter-measures" against any action Japan may take."

3—A report by the newspaper Hochi that the United States had proposed that America and Russia take concerted defensive measures if a "third power" attacked the Dutch East Indies.

4—Reports, which were discounted by an official government spokesman, that Japan had indicated she would refuse to permit American war supplies for Russia to reach Vladivostok on the grounds that such materials might be destined for China.

(Dispatches from China reported that a Chinese guerrilla offensive had been started in the Yellow river area in order to tie up Japanese troops that might otherwise be shifted for action in Siberia or the south Pacific.)

5—Dispatches from Japanese-occupied Saigon said that the bulk of the Japanese expeditionary force in French Indo-China had been sent to Cambodia province, bordering Thailand (Siam).

(Bangkok dispatches said that the Thai armed forces were sent to strategic border points in line

Decide Four Primary Contests Tomorrow

Mansfield Democrats To Mark Choice In Quartet of Races; Less Than 6,000 Expected To Cast Votes.

With no important issues at stake and campaign interest at its lowest point in recent years, Mansfield and Shelby voters will go to the polls Tuesday to nominate candidates for municipal offices.

Richland county election board officials will be surprised if more than a fourth of the approximately 21,000 registered Mansfield voters participate in tomorrow's primary. They said, however, that there may be a quiet "under-the-surface" campaign which may bring out a surprisingly large number of voters.

Just to be on the safe side, the board has enough Democratic and Republican ballots to go around and will have full staffs of voting booth workers on the job from 6:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Only four contests, all on the Democratic ticket, will concern Mansfield voters. Shelby has no contests.

In Mansfield, Democratic voters will choose between Fred M. Bushnell, former postmaster, and James F. Orr, typewriter dealer, in selecting a candidate to oppose Mayor William J. Locke in the November election.

Only other contest which will be decided by voters throughout the city is the Democratic councilman-at-large race in which four candidates are seeking three nominations. George L. Berg, Lester D. Hunter, and Harry M. Emmons, all present members of council, are in the council-at-large contest with Herman P. Speas, a newcomer, in politics.

BLOWN TO BITS

Truck Driver Killed When Liquid Air Explodes.

CADIZ—(AP)—A five-foot hole in the ground and widely scattered bits of metal and flesh gave grim evidence today of the explosion near here of 35 three-inch cartridges of liquid air being trucked from Bloomingdale to Lisbon.

Part of the truck landed on a house a third of a mile away and small pieces of the truck driver's body were picked up from fences, trees and surrounding fields.

The victim, Bernard Smith of near Bloomingdale, was identified by his brother, Paul, from shoe soles. The largest part of the body found was part of a foot.

Detectives Spoil His Plan To Get Rid of 'Hot Stuff'

Transient Approaches Mansfield Policeman With a 'Bargain'; They Take Him Up On It Pronto.

Stealing articles from Mansfield stores wasn't such a tough job for Robert Patterson, transient. It was disposing of them that bothered him.

He finally approached a likely-looking stranger standing at the corner of Sixth and Main streets Saturday night and asked him if he would be interested in purchasing a new flashlight.

The stranger appeared interested and took Patterson around a corner where they conferred with another stranger. Patterson would not divulge where he got the flashlight but assured them that it was "hot stuff," and could be bought at a bargain.

As Patterson spilled out his sales talk, he noticed the strangers eyeing his mid-section which he had well-padded with four ladies' slips and five pairs of ladies' anklets.

He realized his mistake when the "strangers," Detectives Lee Remy and Oscar Krupp, invited him to accompany them to police headquarters.

On the trip to the station, Patterson talked freely with the officers.

"What did they ever do with Lee Remy?" he asked. "He was a swell fellow."

"What was the matter with Krupp, didn't you like him?" asked Remy.

"Oh, Yes," said Patterson, "he was a good fellow, too."

"They laid off both of those fellows, said Remy, "for not making any arrests."

This morning Patterson pleaded guilty to a petit larceny count in Municipal court and was given a sentence of 30 days in Richland county jail by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch.

Police said that Patterson had stolen the ladies' slips and anklets from the Kresge store but were unable to trace the owner of the flashlight.

He still thinks Remy and Krupp are "swell fellows" off the job because they "didn't make any arrests."

3 HOURS LATE

'Trailblazer' Wreck In Indiana Delays Arrival Here.

Derailment of one car of the streamlined "Trailblazer", the Pennsylvania's crack Chicago-to-New York flyer nine miles east of Fort Wayne, Ind., yesterday brought the train limping into Mansfield more than three hours behind schedule, railroad officials said today.

More than 600 passengers aboard the train were shaken up when the third car of the 16-car train left the rails. No one was injured.

Meanwhile, Pennsylvania officials today investigated the cause of the derailment. The derailed car was pulled along for half a mile before the coupling joining it to the fourth car broke loose.

The 13 cars behind were halted by emergency brakes, and the locomotive and the first three coaches were brought to a stop about a mile farther along.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—The coast guard reported today that an oil transfer barge loaded with 400,000 gallons of crude oil was aground on Starve island reef off Sandusky.

The coast guard said that the barge was under tow by the tug Hystler and that the tug was trying to free the larger craft. The coastguard cutter Tahoma at Put-In-Bay was sent to assist the barge.

RECESSES

House Pays Respect In Memory of Late Colleague.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The house recesses today in respect for the memory of the late Rep. Alfred G Rutherford, R., Pa., delaying a vote on the resolution to extend the service of army men.

It was to meet only long enough to adopt a resolution commemorating Rutherford, who died yesterday of a heart attack.

Leaders claimed they had rallied sufficient support over the weekend to make them confident the house would extend the service of draftees, national guardsmen, and reservists for at least 12 months.

The resolution before the house would retain them for the duration of the emergency, but the leaders hold little hope of passing it in that form.

NAZIS CLAIM NEW ADVANCES

Report Armies Smash at Both Ends of Reds' 1,200-Mile Western Front.

(By Associated Press)

Germany's invasion armies smashed deeper into both ends of the 1,200-mile battlefront today, scoring a 60-mile advance toward Leningrad in the north and threatening the Black sea port of Odessa in the south.

Authoritative quarters in London said that two Nazi columns striking toward Odessa from the north and west were making "very considerable progress" and that the important wheat center of Nikolaem, 80 miles northeast of Odessa, was imperilled.

The German drive east, these quarters said, already "may have crossed the Dniester river," apparently speeding operations to pinch off the vast Ukraine granary before the September rains begin.

A bulletin from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters asserted that "pursuit of the retreating enemy

NEW PLAN

Proposes Payment of Income Taxes In Installments.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Sen. Clyde L. Herring, D., Ia., a member of the senate finance committee, proposed today that taxpayers be permitted to pay their income assessments under the new multi-billion dollar tax bill in 12 monthly installments.

The committee hears industry representatives today on the house - approved $3,206,209,000 bill, which Secretary of the Treasury Henry A. Morgenthou has suggested should be increased by at least $500,000,000.

Herring claimed the installment plan would be "more than justified because otherwise citizens would be forced to go to banks and finance companies for loans which would involve an enormous volume of interest payments."

Richland Farmers Demanding Annulment Of Wheat Program

Richland county farmers protesting the government marketing restrictions on wheat had adopted a resolution today asking that the entire AAA wheat program be annulled and that there be "no further interference in the operation of our farms."

Meanwhile, leaders in the protest movement went ahead with plans for a state-wide rally of farmers Wednesday afternoon and evening in the John Simpson Junior high school auditorium.

Principal speaker at the mass meeting will be Russell T. Kiko, Canton, state chairman of the Farmers Protective association. Other prominent farm leaders also are expected to speak at the rally, it was said.

H. H. Fackler, chairman of the Richland county organization, said a state organization will be formed to protest the marketing limitations on wheat and the 49-cent penalty on excess wheat sold. He said several hundred farmers from all sections of Ohio are expected to be here for the meeting.

In their resolution against the federal wheat program, the county farmers also asked that "the American farmer shall not be penalized or restricted in the orderly management of the economical and essential crop rotation of his farm."

The dissatisfied farmers called on congress to make it "impossible for foreign countries to export sufficient wheat to the United States to create a surplus that will work to the disadvantage of our farmers."

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Too frequently these days the press reports some judge offering probation to a convicted criminal if he will enlist in the army or navy. The most recent case, which the local recruiting officer protested vigorously, was in Los Angeles where the prospective probationer was rejected at the recruiting office for moral unfitness.

This touches an important and many-angled subject of national interest. At the outset, it is plain that this judicial practice is altogether vicious.

The moral character of this new draft army is the highest ever known. It is an affront to the army and to every selectee to have this call to service placed by a judge on a level only a little less low than a jail sentence.

It could be just cause for apprehension of families and friends to think that these boys were being taken into an association composed, in part at least, of jail-sweepings or something very close to it.

Such action may not produce an effect, but it is in the direction of an effect, to destroy the institution of selective service in America as it did in England during the reign of the Stuarts.

The idea of absolute liability to military service is intrinsic in Anglo-Saxon law. The methods applied during the Stuart fight with parliament degraded and destroyed it. Jails and even asylums were emptied to recruit armies. The press gangs took the poor and friendless by force just as later, under the Georges, American seamen were impressed.

The idea of conscription became so hateful in England that it has not even yet been as completely accepted either there or in Canada as it has here. We can't countenance even a start in that direction.

About the present automatic exclusion, on the ground of "moral unfitness" of men who have erred, served their punishment and are no longer charged with crime is a more difficult question. If such a man who can show a subsequent record of good conduct can't serve his country there is little merit in the supposed corrective value of our penal system.

Some of these ex-bad-boys have done marvelous military exploits. There are plenty of examples in the French foreign legion where "no questions are asked." It is tradition, at least, that a goodly number of the sailors of Columbus on the first discovery voyage were ex-convicts, if not worse.

With, perhaps, some idea of the presence of such characters in both the foreign legion and the crews of the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria, the discipline was brutal. It is no condition to be encouraged at any time, but there is a real cause to question the automatic exclusion of any and all ex-convicts on the ground of moral unfitness.

In the hope of not being misunderstand, let me repeat that these considerations do not apply to the apparently growing practice of judicial offerings to suspend or withhold punishment for crime if the convict will promptly enlist.

In addition to the other reasons here given, that practice could actually encourage the commission of minor crimes to escape the draft. That is not far-fetched. There are authenticated cases of men having their principal teeth extracted or otherwise maiming themselves to be rendered physically unfit. It is not hard to imagine a mind with that kind of fear or abhorrence of military service practicing a mild larceny, robbery or arson, expecting a short sentence for the first offense in place of an indeterminate hitch in the army or navy.

Shipyard Strike Action Due This Week

PLAN PUTS OPS HERE IN OHIO REGIONAL CORP.

Utility To Be Grouped With Alliance, Toledo Under Proposal Before SEC.

Mansfield district of the Ohio Public Service company will be grouped with the Alliance Public Service company and the Toledo Edison company to form the Ohio Regional corporation under a plan filed with the Securities and Exchange commission, but Joy A. Herbert, vice president and district manager of the O. P. S. here, said yesterday the proposed change would have little effect on the set-up and operations of O. P. S. in the Mansfield district.

Filed with the SEC by Cities Service, the parent company, the plan conforms with the Public Utility Holding company act of 1935 and provides that the principal electric light and power interests of the company be grouped into three regional corporations.

The Ohio Public Service company, under the proposed plan, will be grouped with the Alliance Public Service company, and the Toledo Edison company, to form the Ohio Regional corporation.

Other holdings of the Cities Service company will be similarly grouped to create a Rocky Mountain Regional corporation, and the Mid-Atlantic corporation.

Holders of preferred Cities Service stock will be offered the stocks of these three corporations in exchange for their present holdings.

Each regional corporation will issue 635,000 shares of stock, one share of each of the corporations being offered for each 100 shares of Cities Service preferred stock, considering 10 shares of the 60-cent preference B stock as one share of preferred stock.

All present outstanding $6 cumulative preferred stock, $6 cumulative preference BB stock and 60-cent cumulative preference B stock will be retired and cancelled under the plan, based on 100 per cent acceptance by the holders.

Common stock in the three Ohio utility companies will be acquired by the new Ohio Regional corporation under the terms of the plan.

Although Monday is usually the quietest day of the week in the county marriage license bureau, today was expected to be one of the busiest with three couples applying for licenses before the office had been open an hour this morning. The rush, which began several days ago, has already brought nearly 40 couples to the bureau this month to get licenses before the new state law requiring physical examinations for applicants goes into effect next Monday. Probate Judge Stuart H. Cramer said today that couples who apply for licenses Wednesday or later must bring a doctor's certificate with them before the license will be issued. There is a five-day waiting period after the couples apply for licenses.

U.S. PREPARED TO TAKE OVER KEARNY WAYS

Await Return of Roosevelt From Vacation To Put Plan In Effect.

(By United Press)

Defense officials believed today that the government would seize the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock company plant at Kearny, N. J., this week.

There were no week-end developments improving the outlook for settlement of the strike which began last Wednesday and halted work on nearly $500,000,000 in defense contracts. Representatives of the 14,000 strikers in the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (CIO) already have urged the government to commandeer the plant.

Such action waited, however, on the return of President Roosevelt from a vacation cruise. A plan reportedly has been drafted to place the plant under government control and to assure the union that its union shop demand will be met.

The strike was called after the company refused demands approved by the national defense mediation board, for a modified union shop.

Four hundred AFL craftsmen building a new "wet basin" and three shipbuilding ways had refused to pass picket lines. The CIO union granted them permission yesterday to return to work.

Washington officials believed U. S marines would take over the plant if the government should decide to seize it and that a naval officer would be assigned to operate the shipyard on a "receivership basis."

The CIO shipbuilders' union won the union shop clause in a contract ratified yesterday for employes of the New York Shipbuilding corporation at Camden, N. J. John Green, national president of the union, praised the company for serving as "a model for other shipbuilders to follow."

At Caldwell, N. J., the strike of 300 machinists at the propeller plant of the Curtiss-Wright corporation forced a shutdown at the factory yesterday. The company said the plant would reopen today on a limited basis. The dispute developed over a recent national labor relations board election in which an independent union won bargaining rights in a contest with the AFL.

A Curtiss-Wright spokesman said the strike threatened output at the company's Clifton, N. J., Indianapolis and Pittsburgh propeller factories because production of the plants was integrated.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

IT seems to me that day by day, Bette Davis is getting to look more and more like Tallulah Bankhead—not only in the stills of "The Little Foxes," but off the set, too. Well, it's nothing to complain about.

There's one consolation about the silk stocking shortage: if it gets really serious, nightlifers will be spared the monotony of seeing chorines in every floor show, musical comedy and Radio City stage extravaganza do that inevitable Can-Can routine. There just can't be a Can-Can without those long black silk stockings embellished with scarlet garters.

I giggle when I think of Bing Crosby in a tailcoat. He's strictly a slacks-and-jacket man.

I never saw anyone as mad about speedboats and racing as Guy Lombardo. Nowadays he even goes without meals so he can race. It seems boats go faster if the skipper eats fewer biscuits, of all things.

I wonder if the waiters in Lindy's ever plunk down cold cash to see stage or screen stars perform. They appear so calloused to celebrities. Comes of tossing so many herrings to the Great. I suppose.

I have learned that Miss Hope Hampton has in her lifetime suffered 23 sprained ankles. If that is not the record for ankle-turning, I would like the fans who can top it to step up and let us all get a look at her.

Sometimes I thing wistfully of the dear old bygone era when chorus girls and show dolls christened themselves or were christened by their superiors with such fancy names as Dawn, Desiree, Ruby and Delight, and a girl with a final moniker which did not begin with La— as in LaTour, LaVerne, or LaMarr—was simply not classy, and scarcely fit to associate with the others.

Of recent years there has been a tendency for showgirls to come right out and use their own names, be they Watson, O'Flaherty or Russell, and to heck with glamor.

I love the lower Broadway sector on Sunday mornings. It looks like a wonderful ghost town. . . . I think Veronica Lake's is the most "original" face seen on the screen since Clara Bow. It's chiefly her coiffure, I guess. With that long mane pulled back she looks a lot like Broadway's Julie Haydon.

I never could eat those ice cream sandwiches — too messy. . . . I guess I am just the kind of a girl who could never fall for a cowboy. Hoss oprys leave me chilly, and the lone prairie is the last place in the world I long to be.

Sometimes I wish the movies would turn some of the deep-dyed celluloid villains into nice romantic heroes, just for a refreshing change. Basil Rathbone, for instance, would make a devine hero.

I'd like to be able to look into a crystal ball and see who'll be next season's Mary Martin or Carol Bruce. You just know that right this minute she's answering a chorus call, or walking into a producer's office for a job—but who is she?

Mr. those fur coat ads are beginning to look really enticing, aren't they?

LEAVES PRISON FOR FARM LIFE

Whitney, Former President of Stock Exchange, Takes Over Dairy Job.

(By United Press)

OSSINING, N. Y. — Richard Whitney, former president of the New York Stock Exchange, left Sing Sing prison at 7:52 a. m. today to start life anew as superintendent of a dairy farm at Barnstable, Mass.

Whitney, who henceforth will manage the feeding, care and milking of 25 fine cows, had completed three years and four months of a five-to-10-year term for grand larceny in connection with the failure of his Wall Street brokerage firm.

The man whose personal and company holdings once totaled many millions, left the prison with $183. The sum, however, represented a considerable increment in his personal wealth in the 40 months since he entered the prison.

On April 12, 1938, when Whitney walked through the Sing Sing gates for the first time, he had only $11.85 in his possession. The larger sum with which he left included a $20 "rehabilitation fund" given him by the state, "donations" from friends and relations, and the accumulation of his 25-cents-a-day prison wages.

His farewells said to the murderers, thieves and thugs who had been his fellows while he served out the minimum term of his sentence. Whitney left the prison only a relatively free man.

SEEK TO RESCUE YOUTH TRAPPED IN CREVASSE ATOP MT. RAINIER

(By United Press)

CARBONADO, Wash. — Eight forest rangers today struggled up Mount Rainier, in an effort to rescue Leon Brigham, jr., 21, star end on the University of Washington football team, who fell into a crevasse, 80 feet deep, on Carbon glacier.

The glacier is 8,000 feet up Mount Rainier and hope faded that Brigham would be found alive, if indeed, he had not been killed when he fell.

He fell into the crevasse yesterday, while he was mountain-climbing with four Seattle friends, Dick Berner, Harry Holland, Bill Stromberg and Dick Ruoff. They said he stepped to the edge of the chasm to test the ice with his alpenstock. The ice crumbled and he was plunged, screaming into the crevasse. They heard one muffled groan shortly after he fell.

The others tried to get to him, but their rope was too short, and they could not see him.

Berner raced down the mountain side after help, and collapsed after he had gone 2½ miles. Al Smith, of Renton, Wash., a hiker found him and reported Brigham's accident to the rangers.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, AUGUST 11, 1941.

Most people are glad to admit that they made the mistake of underestimating Russia's fighting strength.

Silk hosiery stocks have reached the point at which, if there's a pair of the right shade they're probably not your size.

As Robert Quillen views it: "A little more inflation and the ill-fed, ill-clothed and ill-housed third will be the salaried people."

League Experts Still at Work

ALTHOUGH the League of Nations is politically dead, a staff of experts is still at work in Geneva. They publish a monthly bulletin of statistics and even got out the current statistical year book. Weekly bulletins are issued reporting on important diseases in countries throughout the world, although such work today must be less accurate and complete than formerly. The clipper planes bring these reports to the United States for the use of our own public health service.

Most surprising is the fact that treaties are still registered with the league by a few countries, including the United States of America, which has never been a member. Four countries have paid their dues for 1941.

As difficulties mount for these workers, there is talk of bringing them and their equipment to Washington, D. C. A number of bureaus have already moved. Most of the league's anti-opium work is now done from Washington. And studies in the economic, finance and transit fields have been transferred to Princeton university.

Perhaps, eventually, such activities will be organized under some other auspices. Their usefulness has been proved. But they do not constitute either a new League of Nations or the means of keeping the old one alive.

Weapons are Dangerous Playthings

USUALLY, as in this instance, it takes a tragedy—or near-tragedy—to direct attention to some quite obvious danger.

While responsibility for permitting irresponsible young children to have firearms and air rifles appears to rest primarily on parents, it is well for Prosecuting Attorney Lutz to call attention to the fact that this is against the law, with a heavy penalty provided.

It was only by good fortune that last week's accidental shooting of a little girl did not result fatally and it should not need explaining to any parent that dangerous weapons ought to be kept out of the hands—and out of reach—of children who are too young to understand that they may injure or kill someone else, or themselves.

In some parts of the city it is quite common for a very young child to have an air rifle and go about the neighborhood killing birds—not realizing that a stray shot might strike a baby or some other youngster playing in the vicinity.

All that should be necessary in such cases is for a resident of each neighborhood where this practice is indulged in to notify the police department and have a warning go to parents—instead of waiting until after an accident.

Somewhat Premature

THE German press has been speaking of "the former German embassy in Moscow," "the former German ambassador to the U. S. S. R.", and so on. An authorized source said simply, in explanation, that "the press probably had a fine instinct for the realities of the future." He added:

"There will not be any Soviet Union at the end of this war and there will not be any Bolshevist regime which created this union of Soviet states."

This might prove true, but it seems a little early for the Germans to assume that the Soviet regime will dissolve because the Germans are in control. Moscow and Leningrad are proving tougher nuts to crack than Paris was. And France is not conquered yet—far from it.

It looks to the rest of the world's press as if Herr Goebbels were giving out some of his prepared copy prematurely. Some of his futures, assumed as accomplished, may not happen at all.

Skyscrapers for Greater Safety

THE SKYSCRAPER method of construction makes the tall buildings of modern years safer than lower modes in case of bombing, says William Orr Ludlow of Madison, N. J., in a report to the American Institute of Architects. This is not because of the height of these buildings, but because the great weight caused by their height has made necessary unusual strength. Several columns of the Empire State building could be wrecked and the structure would still hold together without collapse, said the architect. An entire story of a steel skeleton building can be burnt out and no other story will be damaged, because the fireproofing has been so thorough. An outside wall of one story can be knocked out and the walls of the other stories will remain as they were.

There is also a psychological factor—that of panic. It takes much longer to empty a skyscraper than a lower building, so the architect figures that there will not be streets suddenly crowded with frightened people. It's a long walk down the stairs of a many-storied building, however, and there might be panics and falls on stairways. Strong people are apt to keep their heads under any circumstances, and weak people lose theirs easily, so that factor seems not too important.

More interesting are the statements that above the first three stories the air would be clear of flying debris, of compressed air from falling bombs and probably of poison gas.

It's not pleasant to contemplate the bombing of American cities. But it seems to be necessary.

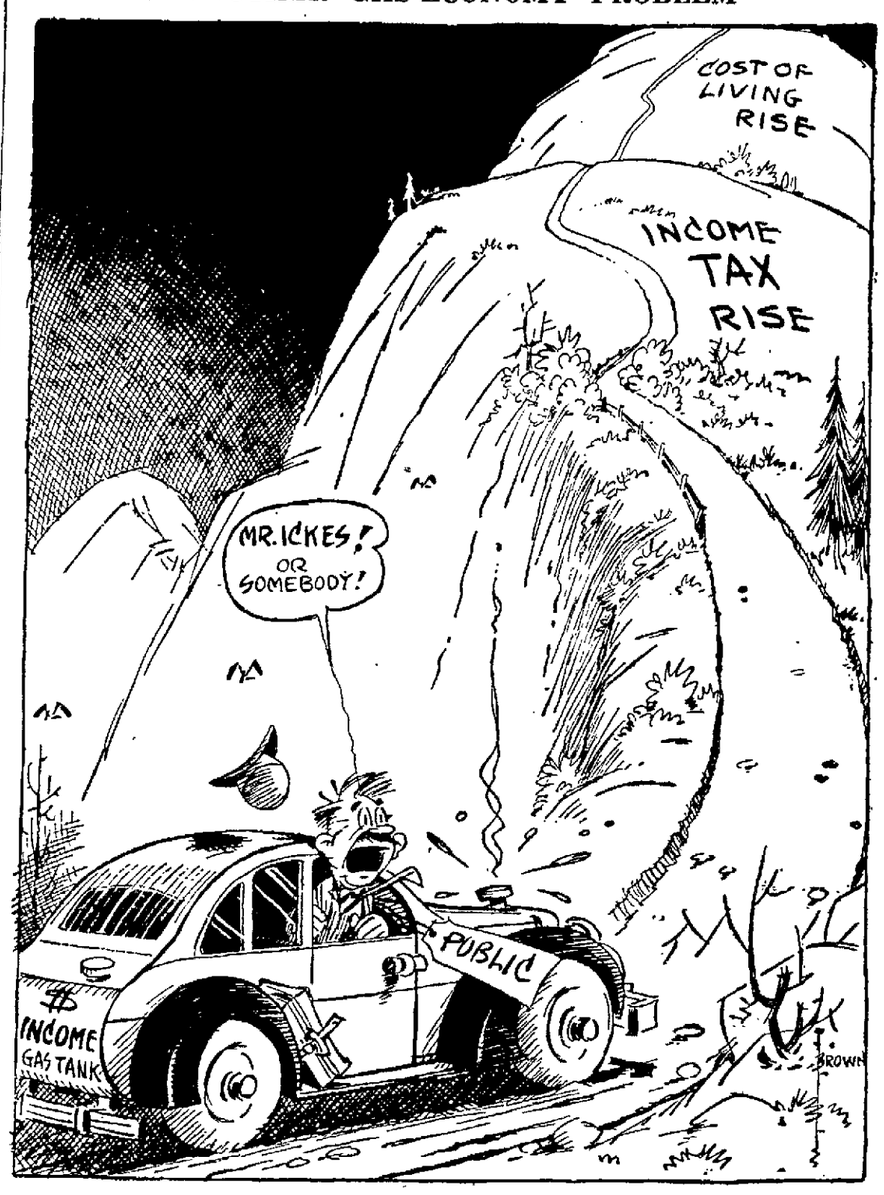
Warns Against Over-Buying

MISS HELEN GREGORY of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply urges consumers to avoid stampedes in connection with any goods. By rushing to get more than a fair share of something they think may run short, they hasten the anticipated shortage and often cause scarcity in other lines.

There are more ways than one to help the cause of the democracies, and being calm and practical instead of panicky is one of them.

According to the census bureau, there are sixty million persons in the country without birth certificates—and they have probably lived just as happily.

ANOTHER GAS-ECONOMY PROBLEM



Economic Defense Gets Attention

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

SOME few things are apparent in connection with the already-beginning activities of President Roosevelt's new Economic Defense board.

One thing is that the board's principal job, while the war lasts, will be to out-economic the Axis in Latin America. The rest of the world either is included in the Axis or is more or less (mostly more) against it.

The democracies don't need any of the board's economic missionary work; their faith's the same as ours right now. As for the Axis countries, they'll take none of our kind of economic medicine, anyway, until it's injected into 'em forcibly. But good economic management in Latin America should be well worth while—solidify our relations with the friends we've got there and win over the element that's a bit clammy toward us yet.

Another thing's obvious. Just at present the defense board isn't really a defense board. It's an offense board—against the Axis. When the war's over, however, defense will be the right word for it. We (the United States) will want to hang onto whatever Latin-American economic status we've made, on into perpetuity.

Before the last war Europe's Latin-American economic status was about 95 per cent to our 5 per cent. The war, perforce, swung the southern republics' trade strongly in our direction. They had to do business with us or nobody.

If we'd had a competent economic board then, to make our neighbors definitely like us commercially, they'd have been our commercial friends permanently. We didn't have one, though. Consequently, as soon as the conflict was over, they flopped economically back to Europe in short order.

This time it'll be up to our board to make hay while the wartime sun shines and then to keep on making the same hay in the same hayfield afterward. And it's got to be the kind of hay that's mutually profitable to us and our western hemispherical neighbors.

Wallace Is Mainspring.

A third thing is evident. The new board plainly is going to consist principally of Vice President Henry A. Wallace. Serving with him are the heads of the state, treasury, war, navy, commerce and justice departments, but they're too busy with their own departmental work to give much attention to Economic Defense Board duties.

The vice president, though, has sufficient leisure for plenty of supplementary assignments. For this especial one Henry Wallace is a first class selection, too. He's specialized on Latin America, speaks excellent Spanish and has the right temperament.

Henry's chief assistant is the board's executive director, Winfield W. Riefler. Winfield doesn't know much of Latin America, but he's an able economist and this is an economic board.

Pan-American problems are largely agricultural, and Henry Wallace was secretary of agriculture. War and navy departmental considerations enter into the equation just now, but won't figure much when peace is restored. Commerce is an important item, as are treasury relationships, and they'll continue so, wars or no wars. What the justice department has to do with the situation isn't so obvious. Still its inclusion in the lineup is harmless.

To be sure, war, navy, commerce and treasury secretaries and Acting Attorney General Biddle aren't Latin-American experts, but Henry Wallace is. The state department naturally is diplomatically up to its neck in such matters, and Undersecretary Welles is a super-expert—more so than Henry Wallace, for he's lived in the Latin Americas. The only point as to Welles is that he's kept so on the jump with diplomacy all over the globe that he probably can't concentrate intensively on one mere continent.

Health and Diet

One In Ten Is Hayfever Victim

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE victim of hayfever this time of year sings a doleful wail, "Why should it be me?" It is estimated that those subject to hayfever constitute about ten per cent of the population. I think in the Middle West, where the ragweed flourishes, the proportion is higher, but at any rate there is some point in the victim's wail because why should nine be entirely free from symptoms, and only one suffer? From all my readings of the latest treatises on the subject, I am not sure that there is any satisfactory answer.

We know certain external facts, but we do not know the explanation of them.

The observed facts are: the ten per cent referred to are known as allergic. This means that they are sensitive to the pollen of certain plants, so that their body cells, particularly in the eyes, nose, throat and bronchial tubes, respond with a violent inflammatory reaction at the presence of these pollens.

Hayfever Hereditary.

We know that the condition is hereditary, and the peculiar reaction of these cells is transmitted from one generation to another. Another fact is that at this season of the year, the chances are all in favor of the cause being the wild plant known as ragweed. This is a non-flowering plant which throws out an enormous amount of fine pollen grains. It is non-flowering because it depends upon the wind rather than insects to distribute its pollen for fertilization purposes.

In one of our Mid-Western cities, it is probable that the daily amount of pollen in the air in the hayfever season would make a pile as high as an office building.

Can Identify Ragweed Victims.

We know also that the victims of ragweed hayfever can be recognized and identified by injecting a weak solution of pollens in salt water under the skin that reacts with a large red wheal at the site of injection. Some of them can be treated successfully by hypodermic injections of a vaccine made from the pollens.

The explanation of why these body cells react in this way is certainly not satisfactory. The investigators say that it is the opposite of immunity—anaphylaxis instead of prophylaxis, and yet they say that vaccines of successful strength will prevent. It is easy to see why weak vaccines will cause an immunity in body cells because they gradually cause the cells to creat anti-bodies, but it is not easy to understand why cells which become sensitive to the slightest amount of pollen can be desensitized by injecting more and more pollen into the body.

Japanese Canal Across Thailand Would Make Singapore Useless

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—For perspective on the present South Pacific tug-of-war between Japan and Britain, it is well to remember that for years Thailand, then known as Siam, was a pawn in the power game of the bigger nations of the Pacific.

In this game the United States had a hand. For years, American financial advisers have been attached to the Thailand throne, one of them having been Francis Sayre, son-in-law of Woodrow Wilson, now high commissioner to the Philippines.

We wooed Thailand on many occasions, including the ornate reception given the former King of Siam, who as "Supreme Arbiter of the Ebb and Flow of the Tide, Brother of the Moon, Half Brother of the Sun and Keeper of the Twenty-four Golden Umbrellas," came to Washington in the days of Herbert Hoover and was regally entertained.

The British were even more interested in the Siamese. British advisers for a time ran the kingdom's government, trained its army, supplied the one or two ships for its navy.

But half a dozen years ago the Japanese began preaching the doctrine of Asia for the yellow man, and Siam for the Siamese. That was how the name came to be changed to Thailand, a nationalistic token of home rule. Young Siamese nationalists took over the government and Thailand grasped the Japanese bait as a step toward nationalism.

Reason for Japan's interest in this small country was not nationalism, but the fact that a slender finger of land, about as wide as the Isthmus of Panama, called the Isthmus of Kra, is controlled by Thailand. A canal through this isthmus, connecting the Indian ocean and Gulf of Siam, would give a new short route from the Pacific to India, render Singapore impotent, and cut three days from the trip between Indo-China and Burma.

Such a canal would leave Singapore's giant guns and expensive naval bases guarding an out-of-date sea highway, almost as unimpotent as the Straits of Magellan after the Panama canal was built.

That is one reason the British are ready to fight to keep the Japanese out of Thailand.

Bureau Snatchers.

RARE is the congressman who hasn't "just the spot" in his district for some foundling agency of the government, especially since the defense program focused attention on over-crowded conditions in Washington.

New York congressmen are busy trying to grab bureaus for teeming Manhattan. Sabath of Illinois wants to transfer certain offices to Chicago. Houston of Kansas sings the praises of Wichita, and Cochran of Missouri has entered a bid for St. Louis.

So far there has been no serious possibility of the proposed transfers taking place. But when the majority and minority leaders of the house, who hail from the same state, take up the chorus, that's different.

Objectively Prejudiced.

SENATOR BURT WHEELER continues to give ironic testimony of his own fair-mindedness in his clamor for freedom of speech and press.

His first demonstration was when he attacked a Philadelphia radio station for alleged refusal to carry a Lindbergh speech, then refused to lift a finger when three Montana stations (operated by Wheeler pals) barred Walter Winchell and other anti-isolationist commentators from the air.

Next display also came in Wheeler's home state. Ex-Governor John Erickson presided at an anti-isolationist meeting addressed by fiery Senator Claude Pepper of Florida. Shortly thereafter Erickson was fired from a $250-a-month state job by Governor Sam Ford, isolationist crony of Wheeler.

Wheeler's latest demonstration of fair play was in the senate. Opposition Senators Nye of North Dakota and D. Worth Clark of Idaho introduced a resolution for a probe of "war propaganda" by the movies and radio. The resolutionwas referred to the interstate commerce committee, headed by Wheeler.

Whereupon, although the senate had not approved the investigation or voted money for it, Wheeler appointed a subcommittee to conduct public hearings "to get at the bottom of these charges of propaganda." And to conduct this inquiry he named:

Isolationist Clark.

Isolationist Homer Bone of Washington.

Isolationist Charles Tobey of New Hampshire.

Isolationist C. W. Brooks of Illinois.

Only reason Wheeler did not appoint Nye is that he is not a member of the interstate commerce committee. Only neutral member of the investigators is Senator Ernest W. McFarland, Arizona rookie.

Note—The statewide poll being conducted by the Great Falls (Mont.) News shows that if Senator Wheeler were running for reelection on his isolationism platform this year he would be defeated by over 100,000. More than 70 per cent of those in the poll who voted for him last year declared they would not do so now.

CIO Revolt.

TROUBLES continue to multiply for A. D. ("Denny") Lewis, brother of John L. and head of the CIO United Construction Workers.

A month ago Denny took a haymaker on the chin when Trotskyite leaders of the Minneapolis Teamsters Local 554 were indicted by a federal grand jury, just after he had taken the AFL-bolting union under his wing—with his brother's approval but without first consulting CIO President Phil Murray.

Latest jolt is a revolt of ten locals of his own union in New York, the strongest purely construction units in the organization. The locals are up in arms on several counts.

One is that in the two years existence of the United Construction Workers there has never been a convention for the election of officers or adoption of a constitution. Another, that out of the $1.50 a month dues national headquarters takes $1, the highest per capita tax in the CIO. The locals say they are unable to operate on the 50 cents they get.

The unions also assert that the New York UCW regional director, hand-picked by Denny Lewis, knows nothing about the construction industry, has refused to employ an organizer for them with the $1 a month per capita tax they have to fork over, and has denied them the right to set up a council for joint action on common problems.

After repeated protests, Local 91, largest of the New York group, last month finally refused to pay the per capita tax. Instead it sent a $1 "token" payment with a demand for reforms.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—In view of all the hullabaloo there has been about subversive elements in labor, it is surprising that there was no more comment on a measure which slipped through the house of representatives in a move to clear the marine radio operators' union of subversive agents.

The so-called Bland bill (sponsored by Rep. Schuyler Otis Bland of Virginia, chairman of the house merchant marine and fisheries committee) would give the Federal Communications Commission the right to deny a radio operator's license to any person employed on a United States merchant marine vessel whose subversive activities are proved to the extent of "reasonable probability."

There are several important things about this bill:

1—Should it become a law, it might well be the pattern for other measures designed to weed the communists, bundists, and what-have-you from other fields of labor. Already several more such bills are being prepared in various committees.

2—Not a single dissenter rose against it in the house and it was given considerably more than lip service by such staunch friends of labor as Rep. Robert Ramspeck of Georgia and Jerry Voorhis of California. Ramspeck, in answer to a question on the floor, admitted that a representative of the CIO, with which the marine radio operators' union is affiliated, had asked him to oppose the bill, but said he had told him that he could no do so.

3—The bill defines a "subversive individual" as any one who believes in or advocates, or at any time has believed in or advocated "controlling, conducting, influencing, seizing, or overthrowing the government of the United States, by force, violence, military measures, or threats of any of the foregoing. . . . Who is, or at any time was, a member of, or who solicits or advocates membership in . . . the Communist party, the German-American Bund, the Young Communists league," or any other organization which believes in or teaches the tenets set forth. It doesn't take a Philadelphia lawyer to tell you that this covers a lot of territory, especially after the house committee added to it that a person is also guilty who "disseminates or distributes, or at any time has, etc., subversive propaganda."

4—According to Ramspeck, passage of the bill immediately would result in the revoking of licenses for about 150 of the 2,000 radio operators now employed by the merchant marine. These men would have the privilege of open hearings, but they would have to disprove evidence assembled against them by the army and navy intelligence services and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

As an example of how some members of congress feel about it, let's quote Ramspeck again. "I do not believe," he said, "it is in the interest of labor or anybody else in this country to have subversive individuals holding memberships in labor unions and in position to do damage to the welfare and safety of the United States of America and its merchant marine."

VOORHIS contributed this: "It has been my view all along that the kind of legislation that should be brought in the house is legislation that would attempt in a very careful and discriminating manner to separate the great rank and file of American labor from those elements that really make for trouble for the labor movement itself."

This may be only a straw in the wind, but insiders on Capitol Hill think it might also be a good-sized hunk of timber in building a foundation for a labor movement completely free of "fifth columnists." If this measure goes through the senate without any serious blasts of opposition, the seamen may be next—and after that other labor groups involved in national defense.

It may be that the "enemy of democracy" boys in the labor camps are in for a bit of legislated trouble.

A Farmer's Diary

A Long View

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

WE WERE driving with our friends, the hale old farmer and his little white-haired wife, when at a hilltop, we came to a magnificent view. We exclaimed, involuntarily, at the distance, and the beauty of the hills and valleys. The old man chuckled and put a sudden hand upon my arm. "Stop here," he said. "Draw over to one side and wait a little. I want to tell you something."

He still chuckled as the car came to a stop. Then he pushed back his big straw hat and half turned in his seat as he pointed to a hollow beside the road. "Sixty years ago a mulberry tree used to stand right there," he said. "The bees liked the mulberries. One day I came along here and saw a sight"—he chuckled again—"speakin' of that view brought it all back, like it happened yesterday.

"A fellow named Sim Smith was comin' in from that way with his mules and wagon. Simmy was a tall, ungainly, awkward, pimply chap, with a bumpy forehead. He was lookin' at the view. They used to say you could see a white hen 10 miles off on that knob over there—maybe he was seein' one. Anyhow he kept lookin' and turnin' his head to look some more—and he never noticed that a swarm of bees had lit right on a branch above the road.

"I came from the other way and saw what happened—but no time to tell 'im. It was a big swarm and the mules went on either side of it so that it went between their heads and whammed against the upright of the wagonrack, in front of Sim! Tsk, tsk!"

"About that time he quit looking at the view," I suggested.

"Such kickin' and stompin' as those mules put on! They were all over the road at once. And was Simmy's face red! He got stung, of course! I guess his eyes swelled so he couldn't look that far for quite a while afterward. I had to wait until the bees quieted down, before I could get past...That was more'n sixty years ago, but every time I've passed here since, I've had to laugh...Drive on now. It is 10 miles away, that knob."

"Not everybody's sense of humor is like yours, though," remarked the quiet little old lady from the back seat. "Why sometimes he'll wake up at night," she added, "and think of something funny that happened 50 years ago, and laugh out loud. Then every whipstitch the bed'll shake, when he thinks of something else."

with the government's policy of strictly enforcing Thailand's neutrality. United States army officers arrived in Bandoeng, in the Dutch East Indies, today to confer with Dutch authorities regarding delivery of American war material.)

The statement of Wakasugi, made by telephone from Los Angeles to the newspaper Nichi Nichi, said that "the attitude of the United States concerning Thailand is very delicate."

He described the United States as desirous of maintaining friendship with Japan but "they seem prepared with resolution."

"It is clear," he added, "that the Americans will not take the initiative but their attitude will depend solely upon Japan's.

"All counter-measures against Japan already have been fixed. They will be enforced one-by-one in consideration of any steps Japan may take.

"The United States is mistakenly impressed by the idea that Japan is doing in the Far East what Germany is doing.

"Americans are engrossed in expansion of national defense and the influence of the anti-war factions is not as great now as previously. The government is prevailing in everything.

"It is a great mistake to consider the United States on the basis of conditions prevailing a year ago."

Wakasugi's statement was regarded with great interest in Japan as it coincided with press reports of plans for intensified cooperation among the United States, Britain, Russia and China.

The Japanese reports reviewed this cooperation building up toward these possibilities:

Joint American and Russian "aid and strategy" in the East Siberia area.

American-British aid for China against Japan.

Participation of Australian and Burmese forces in the defense of southwestern China.

American-British aid in China's military operations in northwestern China.

U. S. Waits Vichy Cabinet Decision

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The United States made its future diplomatic relations with the French government contingent on the decisions taken today at the meeting of Marshal Petain's cabinet in Vichy.

Relations would be severed, it was reported, if the Vichy government acceeds to the latest German collaboration demands and permits the Nazis the "share" they seek in defending the French empire.

This possibility caused conjecture whether the United States might then extend recognition to the "free French" forces of General Charles De Gaulle. The state department, however, held to its non-committal attitude on the subject.

Regardless of what happens on this particular point, the belief in diplomatic circles was that the United States would adopt a vigorous counter policy against any Franco-German collaboration program promising to install Nazi forces in the strategic bases on the Atlantic seacoast of French African Colonies.

Any deal that would allot Germany a "share" in defending French possessions, it was pointed out, would immediately bring into question the status of French colonial holdings in the western hemisphere—notably the strategically located island of Martinique in the Caribbean.

As for Nazi utilization of bases on the coast of Africa, President Roosevelt on May 27 specifically mentioned French Dakar among other bases when he spoke of "the vital importance of keeping Hitlerism away from any point in the world which could be used and would be used as a base of attack against the Americas."

NAZIS CLAIM NEW ADVANCES

in the Ukraine is progressing rapidly everywhere."

Nazi officials declared that Marshal Semeon D. Budyenny's Red army of the south had practically lost the entire Dnieper bend. The vast and fertile plateau southeast of Kiev.

DNB, the official German news agency, said the 180th Soviet light infantry division (about 15,000 men) had been completely destroyed south of Lake Ilmen, on the front below Lenmgrad.

Lake Ilmen lies east of Soltsi, which is 120 miles south of Leningrad, where the Russians had already conceded a 60-mile German break through from the old Pskov battlefield.

Nevertheless, the Russians declared that their armies, reinforced by a rising tide of militia, were holding firmly against the German onslaught.

A Soviet communique pictured the 51-day-old struggle as continuing violently overnight in the bloody Smolensk salient, 230 miles west of Moscow; on the Estonia front, and at Bel Tserkov, 50 miles south of Kiev, the Ukraine capital. A fierce new battle was reported developing in the Uman sector, midway between Kiev and Odessa.

The disputed city of Smolensk itself had fallen to the Nazis, an Associated Press correspondent, the first American newspaperman to reach that sector since it was first reported captured by the Germans on July 16, said the city had been virtually erased. He quoted a German officer as saying the city had been 90 per cent destroyed by shell-fire and by retreating Soviet troops carrying out Premier Joseph Stalin's orders for a "scorched earth" policy.

Hitler's high command said Nazi warplanes struck violently at Moscow during the night—the 16th raid on the Soviet capital—and "dropped many tons of explosives and incendiaries on the armament industry, primarily northwest and east of the city."

The Russians admitted an attack by several waves of luftwaffe raiders, in which civilian casualties mounted as incendiaries touched off fires in the ruin of dwellings smashed by high explosives. The assault lasted four hours and 15 minutes.

DNB said that in the raid the night before, 100 German planes showered thousands of fire bombs on the Red capital and scored a direct hit with a heavy bomb on the Kremlin.

Berlin reported warding off an aerial attack from the northeast—presumably the Red air fleet's third long-range foray against the reich capital.

Aside from the critical battle in the Ukrain, Hitler's headquarters reported tersely that "operations on other parts of the eastern front are proceeding according to plan."

Soviet reports said units of the peoples' army which Premier Stalin called to arms last month had gone into front-line action, bolstering the Red army, and that civilians in the Moscow area were being trained by the thousands in street fighting with hand grenades, rifles and bayonets.

The Germans reported great sections of Marshal Budyenny's southern flank army wiped out and said other large forces might find themselves unable to withdraw from the Ukraine.

Military authorities in Washington, weighing the widely-conflicting casualty claims of the Russian-German war estimated that the first seven weeks of the fight probably cost the Nazis more than a million men in dead, wounded and missing — several times more than the Germans were believed to have lost in 23 previous months of campaigning.

The Russians, these sources said, likely lost even more heavily, so that casualties of both armies probably exceeded any losses the German or Russian forces had in a similar length of time during the World war.

his gun. A convict in the back seat pushed Beavers aside whipped the automobile around and fled while Alexander reloaded.

Alexander and Pollock cornered them again on a road where a bridge was under construction. The remaining three convicts leaped out and took refuge in a ditch. Pollock tried to shoot, but he had brought an empty gun and no ammunition.

Standing in the road, with Pollock reloading cartridge clips for him, Alexander killed McGee, when he raised himself to shoot, and wounded Anderson. Prather crawled out, pleading: "Don't shoot, don't shoot."

The body of Dunn was found in the front seat of the automobile. He had been shot three times in the head with a pistol. Fentriss, in the back seat, was not harmed.

Officials believed the convicts killed Dunn in revenge, when they saw they were cornered.

Beavers was sentenced to 25 years for armed robbery and McGee was sentenced to 15 years for the same crime. They led an abortive break five years ago in which a brick yard superintendent was killed, and for that, their terms were extended to life.

Mansfield Democrats To Mark Choice In Quartet of Races at Polls Tomorrow.

Kutschall will battle it out with Michael A. Mihalick for the Democratic nomination for council in that ward. The other contest is between Councilman Arthur L. Croak and Stanley L. Wilburn in the Sixth ward.

Democrats who will be unopposed in tomorrow's primary and need only one vote to put them on the ballot are:

Howard G. Miller, council president; Earle K. Troll, city treasurer; Leslie K. Wagner, city solicitor; W. F. Feigenbaum, First ward council; Joseph Foncannon, Second ward council; Richard H. Wynn, Third ward council; Fred Miller, Fifth ward council.

On the Republican side, where no one has opposition, Mayor Locke is heading the ticket for a second term. Others are:

W. C. Mansfield, council president; Dean A. Eckert, city treasurer; Lydon H. Beam, city solicitor; Roy Vaughn, George Kyle, and James R. Anderson for council-at-large; Russell D. Porch, First ward council; C. N. Shultz, Second ward council, and Paul W. Bush, Sixth ward council. The Republicans have no candidate for council in the Fifth ward where there is a big Democratic majority.

Voters may "write in" names of favorites in the primary, and election board workers expect to find a number of additional names on the ballots tomorrow night.

LELAND BALLROOM SCENE OF WEDDING

Miss Helen Strauss of Ashland Becomes Bride of Borris B. Leavitt of Cleveland In a Ceremony Solemnized Sunday Afternoon.

BEFORE a background of palms, ferns and tall beauty baskets of white gladioli, Miss Helen Nora Strauss, 236 Highland avenue, Ashland, exchanged nuptial vows with Borris B. Leavitt of Cleveland Sunday afternoon in the ballroom of the Mansfield-Leland hotel. The ceremony was witnessed by a large group of relatives and friends. Rabbi Rube officiated for the ceremony solemnized at 3 o'clock.

For her wedding Miss Strauss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Strauss of Ashland, wore a beige sheer street length frock with brown accessories and a corsage of white orchids. She was given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. Irving Schultz of Ashland, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a green afternoon frock with brown accessories and a corsage of gardenias. Nathan Strauss of Ashland, brother of the bride, was usher, and best man was Joe Leavitt of Cleveland, brother of the bridegroom.

Nuptial music was heard preceding the service. Mrs. Strauss appeared at her daughter's wedding wearing a rust print sheer with a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Anna Leavitt of Cleveland, the bridegroom's mother, wore a powder blue street length dress with an orchid corsage.

Immediately following the wedding a reception for 200 guests was held in the ballroom. Later a dinner was served for the bridal party and guests. Mr. and Mrs. Leavitt left late last evening for a trip to Mackinac Island and the Georgian Bay territory. For traveling Mrs. Leavitt wore a blue and white linen suit and blue accessories.

The bride was graduated from Ohio State university where she was affiliated with the Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority. Mr. Leavitt, who owns and manages the shoe department at Milgrims in Cleveland, was graduated from Wisconsin university where he was affiliated with the Phi Sigma Delta fraternity. He and his mother have resided at 10525 Grantwood avenue, Cleveland. "The Authority on Authorities"

TWO-BID RESPONSES

Most contract players, who use opening suit bids of two to guarantee enough strength to get the side into a game contract, employ the same responses as a half dozen or more years ago. A raise of the suit indicates four cards of it or three headed by the queen or better, and at least one honor trick in the hand. The showing of a new suit proclaims a biddable suit in a hand containing at least one honor trick. A bid of 3-No Trumps indicates at least an honor trick and a half. Lacking any of these, the response is 2-No Trumps.

Many of the leading experts, however, have been experimenting with two entirely different kinds of responding theories, really contrasting theories, as indicated by these hands:

1.	2.
♠ 6 3	♠ 6 3
♥ A 5 2	♥ 10 8 7 5 4 2
♦ J 6 3 2	♦ J 6 3
♣ 8 7 5 4	♣ 7 4

Opposite an opening bid of 2-Spades, the followers of one theory would bid 3-Hearts on No. 1, to show the heart ace. Devotees of this top-showing procedure have worked it out so thoroughly, in some cases, that they have a whole formula for responses. With two aces, they proclaim that fact by bidding 4-No Trumps. With one ace, they bid the suit containing the ace. With a trick and a half in high card strength, but no ace, they bid 3-No Trumps. Lacking these, they bid 2-No Trumps. Their idea is that the original bidder has some safe declaration or declarations in mind and wishes only to know about slam material in the first response.

The other extremists would bid 3-Hearts over 2-Spades on a hand like No. 2, to show either a six-card suit regardless of the hand's honor strength or a five-card suit topped by at least Q-J-10, or, in other words, a suit containing at least three playing tricks. They argue that frequently a hand strong enough for a two-bid will not make game if you have to keep leading away from it, whereas it might make game at the suit held by the worthless hand, which is undeniably true sometimes. These people bid 2-No Trumps as a first response to deny such a suit, or suit fit with the original bid, regardless of how strong their hands may be in honors. They show honor strength by later bids, just as followers of the contrary theory indicate distributional values by second round and later bids.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

My answering smile at Mary was an involuntary one. My mood had been anything but indulgent when I dropped off to sleep, and I felt no urge toward leniency upon this awakening. But I defy anyone to refuse to smile at Mary when she turns on her full charm, although I made up for my weakness the next instant by infusing sternness into my reply to her challenge.

"And I am ready to listen to anything you may wish to tell me," I said measuredly.

"I knew it!" she said. "No elephant has anything on you, Auntie Madge. Well! I guess I deserve everything you're going to give me. So go ahead. Shoot the works!"

Her flippancy grated on me, even though I knew that she was using it as a mask to cover her very real remorse for her flirtation with Redfield. But I was also sure — knowing Mary—that her contrition was for the alarming aftermath of her flamboyant actions, rather than for the performance itself. If Noel had not frightened her by his murderous rage against Redfield, I doubted if she would have had so keen a sense of guilt.

The conviction steeled my disapproval of her flippant attitude, made me push into the background the indulgent fondness I have for this winsome niece of Dicky's, as dear to me as any blood kin possibly could be.

She needed a bit of deflation, I told myself, and I bolstered my determination to discipline her with a remembrance of the extravagant justification of her that I had given to Noel.

Needed Her Wings Clipped.

The beautiful "bird of paradise" needed her wings clipped a bit, I told myself grimly, and kept my face sober, even stern, as I rose to a sitting posture.

"Please sit down," I said with a tinge of formality in my manner as I put my feet to floor.

She shot an uneasy side glance at me.

"Must you get up?" she asked solicitously. "You are so tired. Can't you talk and listen lying down?"

"I'm sorry," I said, conscious that my voice and manner were distinctly stilted, "but I prefer to sit up. Thank you," as she pushed forward a chair and seated me, "Will you please bring that other over opposite to me?"

Lets Mary Decide.

"I am afraid you are not going to like what I am going to say to you, Mary," I began. "Of course, I know that you are in no way under my control, and that you are under no obligation whatever to listen to me. So you must decide now whether or not I am to go on with this talk."

Her movement toward me was as swift as that of a humming bird in flight. She fairly flung herself upon me, and enveloped me in an embrace so strenuously affectionate that it left me breathless.

"If you ever say that again—about my not being obliged to listen to you—I'll—I'll do something simply awful to you," she threatened. "Not under your control, indeed! That a laugh! If I live to be ninety, and you tell me to do something—or not to do it—I wouldn't think of disobeying you."

I returned her embrace warmly, for I could not repulse affection like hers even from someone for whom I do not care as deeply as I do for Mary. But then, mindful of what I had to do, I undid her clinging arms from my neck, and gestured to the chair she had left.

"Please sit over there," I said firmly. "I cannot possibly talk to you as I wish while you are here."

Shock May Keep Child From Harm

By GARRY MYERS, Ph.D.

When I was a boy on a farm, we built rail fences, several rails high. When wire was substituted for rails there had to be as many or more, unless these wires were barbed. Even then several wires were necessary. Now I find that many farmers get along with a fence of but a single wire and with posts far apart. A light electric current runs through the wire. This strikes me as about the greatest invention since a way was first discovered to poison potato bugs.

Back now to the pasture. I have watched a cow get her first lesson from a modern fence. Almost as curious as a tot, she pushed her nose against the wire and as she did went into reverse explosively. She had gotten a shock. I've seen a cow or two try touching the wire a second or even third time; none oftener. Thereafter she avoided the wire, even the grass near it, and stayed in the field.

Might Save Children.

A child beginning to toddle must be as smart as a cow. He could learn easily and quickly not to run into the street from the curb if a smooth wire very slightly charged were in his way. Such a device might save a good many precious lives.

A wise parent can easily provide an equally effective substitute without a wire. She or he can be on hand, when the child first ventures unaided into the street, to give this tot a stinging shock the moment he steps off the curb. How? By immediately spanking him then and there.

Works With a Toddler.

Like the cow, the tot may try it once or twice more. But if, like the cow, he got instantaneous pain each time, he would not venture from the curb unaided many times.

This system works with the toddler just as surely as it works with the cow. But you may say you know many little children who are often spanked for running into the street, but keep on running there in spite of the punishment. Yes, but the invisible wire was not always there. The youngster went into the street many time before he got the first "shock" and many times thereafter without getting any shock.

To be effective a shock must always happen right away as surely as it happened to the cow. There must be no exception. Good cow psychology may also be good child psychology.

If you would like to read further on what I have written on discipline of the young child, you may find it in my books, "The Modern Parent" and "Marriage and Parenthood"; also in my pamphlet, "To punish or not to punish: when and how," to be found, no doubt, in your public library.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. Suppose your son or daughter were infatuated with one of the opposite sex you considered undesirable. What would you do?

A. I would try not to belittle the girl or boy I disliked and would try, moreover, to be courteous to him or her. I would try to attract to my home on frequent occasions a number of boys and girls I considered more desirable, together with the "undesirable" boy or girl, hoping my son or daughter would evaluate in comparison the less desirable traits in the object of his or her heart's desire.

Spear and Enos Capture N-J Tennis Doubles Title

Sport Podge by REX HESS

The argument waxed hot and heavy around the press box at the Fairground Saturday night after the double header which saw Mansfield beat Findlay 3 to 0 and 11 to 7.

Manager Alex Clowson of the Braves insisted that Jim Coleman, who hurled the opening shutout and three innings of the second game before leaving with a 10 to 7 lead, should receive credit for the win in the second game.

This old Podger and official score keeper insisted just as strongly that Chuck Byers should receive credit for the win because he hurled more than half the game. And Byers did and continues to receive credit for the win.

Let me quote from page 65 of the 1941 edition of the manual for official scorers and league statisticians published by the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues:

"Do not always give the first pitcher credit for a game won, even if the score is in his favor, unless he has pitched five innings (in a nine inning game).

"If, however, he is taken out because of his team having secured a COMMANDING and winning lead in a few innings, or is removed from the game through an injury or illness, or is removed from the game by the umpire when his team has a COMMANDING lead, then he is entitled to be credited with the victory.

"The good judgment of the scorer must determine in such cases, as much depends on whether the pitcher was relieved because of ineffectiveness or for other reasons."

End quote. The instructions are clear and were carried out. Coleman was removed because he allowed six runs in the preceding inning. The 10 to 7 lead proved to be a winning lead, but it wasn't a commanding one. And Byers was put in to save the game.

He saved it by some great pitching, allowing only one hit, no runs, and fanning nine in the last four innings, besides pitching more than half the game.

And for losing this little argument Skipper Clowson now owes me the sum of five bucks which I am in no hurry to collect.

Alex thinks Coleman should have plenty of credit for going in there and trying to pitch that second game. I think the fans present gave him all that credit.

And I think too that Byers deserves plenty of credit for going in there for four innings of relief after pitching nine innings the night before.

But credit or no credit, you score a game on that game alone, not on the game before or the day before or the week before. The rules don't give scorers that much leaway.

Oh for the life of a baseball scorer,
The boys get credit, but they want more (r).
(They've got me stuttering now.)

Drop Tilt To Mt. Gilead

Sink Liberties After Five Hitless Innings.

The Liberty park nine dropped a 6-2 decision to Mt. Gilead yesterday, at Mt. Gilead, despite the hurling of Hazlett who held the home team hitless for five innings.

A homer by J. Wolfe for Mt. Gilead started the Libertymen on the road to defeat. Mt. Gilead bunched the remainder of their seven hits to outscore the Parkmen 6-2.

Red LeMunyon combed the delivery of Dumbaugh for a triple and single to pace the Liberties at the plate. Joe Atton added a double for the only other extra base blow of the game.

Lois Weingartner Wins Singles Crown Again

Charley Franzen Takes Junior Singles In Net Tournament.

THE News-Journal's City tennis tournament came to a grand climax yesterday at Johns park with the deciding of three championships, leaving only one division of the tourney uncompleted.

Bob Spear got in on his second championship of the joust when he teamed with Bob Enos to capture the doubles title, Lois Shuey Weingartner successfully defended her women's singles championship, and young Charley Franzen blazed through to the junior singles crown.

All three finals matches were decided in straight sets, but none of them were push-overs for the winners. Some brilliant tennis was displayed in all three matches, and many a hard-fought deuce point went down in the books before games were decided.

* * *

In each match consistency in returning shots proved the deciding factor as the losers showed just about as good shot making ability as the new champions.

Feature match of the day was the fast play in men's doubles where Spear and Enos downed Thornton Moore and Bob Ellison 6-2, 6-3, 7-5.

In each of the last two sets Moore and Ellison had the champions 3-0 but couldn't stand prosperity or the rallying attack of Spear and Enos.

Net play of both teams in this match was particularly brilliant and numerous rallies saw prolonged rapid-fire exchanges at the net without the ball touching the court.

Lois Shuey Weingartner defeated Ann Arron for the second straight year in the women's finals 6-3, 6-4, outsteadying the challenger for the title in the stretch drive in each set.

High point of the match for the gallery however was the game comeback staged by Miss Arron in the second set when it appeared she was on the way to a love-set defeat.

Trailing 3-0 she rallied to deadlock the count at 4-4 before Mrs. Weingartner settled down to take the two deciding games.

These boys turned in some of the cleverest net play of the tournament, refusing to go for kills on high lobs, and putting them away on neat pot shots to the sidelines.

Both played good position throughout the match, but Franzen was able to out-maneuver his opponent more consistently, and came home a winner on that strong part of his game.

Altogether the play in the junior division, both boys and girls, in the final matches was of a high order and gave promise of future strengthening of the senior divisions.

* * *

Mixed doubles play will be completed this week. Ann Arron and Bob Spear were scheduled to meet Mary Gregoria and Andy Zoll in a semi-finals match this evening at Woodlawn, but threatening weather this morning made it doubtful if the match would be played on schedule.

The winners will meet Lois Shuey Weingartner and Bob Enos for the championship.

Win News-Journal City Tennis Titles

LOIS SHUEY WEINGARTNER

Winners of singles titles in matches yesterday at Johns park in the News-Journal City tennis tournament were Mrs. Weingartner, who successfully defended her women's championship, and Charley Franzen, who captured the junior crown.

Providents Keep Title

Rise To Heights In State Tournament.

After a not too successful season, Mansfield Provident Loans rose to the heights over the weekend to successfully defend their state girls' softball championship at Youngstown.

Saturday night they defeated Kent 4-2 to gain the tournament semi-finals, and Sunday they came back with a 5 to 0 victory over Mickey's Grill of Dayton, then defeated the Bittner Funeral Home of North Ridgeville 6 to 3 in the finals.

The girls played great ball throughout the tourney, according to Mansfield fans who made the Youngstown trip, and richly deserved to carry the state title for the second straight year.

North Ridgeville gained the finals by defeating Fink & Heine of Springfield, 6-4. The Springfield team had defeated Warren, Youngstown district champion and a pre-tourney favorite to cop the bunting.

Fran Knapp hurled the first and last games for Mansfield, and Marguerite Everts of Elyria, picked up for the tournament, hurled the semi-final shutout, allowing only four hits and striking out four.

This was the only shutout of the entire tournament. In this game Margaret Tipul clouted a triple and two doubles and Bucky Holda connected for a home run.

* * *

In the final game Fran gave up six hits but turned in six strikeouts to keep the edge on the Ridgeville club.

Weatherly Back In Doghouse As Tribe Opens Tiger Series

DETROIT —(AP)— Roy (Little Thunder) Weatherly, Cleveland's only .300 hitter last season, sat deep in the tribal dog-house today while the Indians opened a two-game series with the Tigers.

The speedy center fielder didn't play yesterday as the Redskins dropped two tussles to Chicago, 5 to 2 and 2 to 1, and he was one of the four players left behind when the Indians began a one-week western tour.

Also remaining in Cleveland were Pitchers Mel Harder and Joe Heving, who have sore arms, and Hal Trosky, who has been bothered with headaches.

* * *

Drama being somewhat outside this department's scope, there will be no effort made here today to tell you in glowing phrases of the history-making National League pennant race now in progress.

* * *

The drama, instead, will be left in the hands of the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals — and capable hands they are, too—while this will serve as a simple recitation of the facts:

Last Friday night Brooklyn was in front by three percentage points. Since then each team has played three contests. Yet today those same three points are all that separate the Dodgers in first place from the Cardinals in second.

This was achieved by a chain of circumstances which first saw the Boston Braves snap a seven-game Dodger winning streak on Saturday, and the Cardinals promptly lost a 13-inning thriller to the rambunctious Pittsburgh Pirates. Then yesterday there was a double victory for Brooklyn over the Braves, whereupon the Cards, already having won the opener of their doubleheader from Pittsburgh, broke loose with three runs in the eighth inning of the nightcap to take that as well.

The Dodgers in the first tilt which almost broke into open warfare because of the Dodgers felt Dick Errickson was trying to dust them off, pounded three pitchers for 17 hits, including four doubles and a homer by Ducky Medwick, for a 14-4 decision. The nightcap saw stout Frederick Fitzsimmons and his knuckleball shut out the Braves, 4-0, on six hits.

Close-to-the-vest pitching was the winning prescription for the Cards. A crowd of 26,513, one of the year's largest in St. Louis, saw Ernie White take the opener, 3-2, for his 14th decision as Terry Moore's pinch-single drove in the deciding runs, and then watched Mort Cooper, though touched for 10 safeties, bear down in the clutch to win his 10th of the year.

The baseball tradition that it's bad luck to get presents held true for the Chicago Cubs' Charley Root. The 42-year-old veteran got a station wagon from his fans, a $1,600 check from his club and even a baby pig. But when he settled down to work he got a 3-1 trimming from the Cincinnati Reds, whose Johnny Vander Meer was in seven-hit form.

The New York Giants ran the last-place Phillies' losing streak to eight in a row by winning the first half of their double bill, 5-4, but then lost to veteran Si Johnson, 4-3.

In the American League the New York Yankees took two from the Philadelphia Athletics, 11-2 and 4-1, and thereby climbed back into a 14-game lead over Cleveland.

The Boston Red Sox were their slugging selves in trimming the Washington Senators, 7-6, but in the nightcap couldn't bunch their 10 hits off Venezuelan Alejandro Carrasquel, who chalked up an 8-2 triumph.

Buck Newsom of the Detroit Tigers, who hasn't won a game since July 15, didn't win one yesterday, either. The St. Louis Browns got to him early for nine hits in four innings, got six more off Schoolboy Rowe, and won, 7-3.

Takes Top Honors In Club Matches

T. Kelser took the laurels at the Mansfield Muzzle-Loader Rifle club's shoot at the club grounds west of Mansfield, Saturday, with a percentage total of .611.

Three firsts and a second in six matches gave Kelser his high mark. G. Lantz was second with .533.

* * *

Lantz took the string measure honors with 1.53 inches for three shots at 50 yards.

Braves Gain on Fremont

Win Second Twin Bill In as Many Days.

DON'T count those Mansfield Braves out of the running yet for the second-half championship of the Ohio State league fans.

Just last Saturday Mansfield fans were ready to give up and concede the title to Fremont, but things have happened since Saturday morning when the Braves trailed by six games with only three weeks left to play.

The Braves have won four straight games in two days, all of them from the Findlay Oilers, and have stepped up to within four games of Fremont, and have pulled two and a half games away from the Fostoria Red Birds with whom they had been virtually tied for second place.

Yesterday afternoon at Findlay the Braves scored three runs in the ninth inning to win 12 to 9, and last night Lefty Bob Kuzava completely subdued the Oilers as Mansfield romped away with an 11-2 decision.

Beating the last place Oilers in two double headers in as many days may not be looked upon as a great feat ordinarily, but in the present crippled condition of the Mansfield hurling staff it's something to cheer about, and proves once more that Mansfield has had a hustling ball club this season.

The Braves got away to an 8-1 lead in the first four innings of the afternoon tilt, but the Oilers came back with four in the next two frames.

After Mansfield made it 9 to 5 in the first half of the eighth, Findlay got to Freddy Wolpert for a four-run rally to tie the score in the last half of the same stanza, and Jim Coleman came in to put out the fire.

It was Jim's third mound appearance in two days, and in three straight games.

Then came the three-run winning rally for the Braves in the ninth, and the boys went swimming in the pool near the Findlay ball park.

Findlay threatened to make it interesting in the early stages of the night fracas. Each team scored a run in the first inning, and Mansfield came back with one in the second and Findlay with one in the third.

From there on it was all Mansfield and Kuzava turned on his southpaw steam for a six-hit game in which he fanned 4 of the Oilers.

The Braves won the game with two runs in the fourth, added three in the sixth, and added insult to injury by pounding four more markers across the platter in the ninth.

In the absence of the injured Eddie Mutryn who has a broken thumb, Bobby TeStruth took over the slugging burden, clouting a home run in the second game. It was his third round-tripper of the year, his other two coming in one game at Tiffin early in the season.

TeStruth also got a double while Alex Clowson and Bill Reinka also checked in with two-baggers.

Tonight the Braves are scheduled to meet the Tiffin Mud Hens at the Fairground in a single game at 8 o'clock.

FRED M. BUSHNELL TELLS WHY HE IS A CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR

FOR THE PAST 18 months Democratic friends have suggested that I become a candidate for the party's nomination for Mayor. I have talked with Democrats in every Ward and Precinct. I have taken into consideration conditions as they now exist and have sought, insofar as humanly possible, to determine some of the problems which the future holds in store for our city and our people. I did not make the decision quickly but once the facts had been gathered and summed up I decided to become a candidate for the office of Mayor subject to the wishes of the Democratic party at the primaries Tuesday, August 12.

CHAPTER I

The face pressed against the window of the plane winging its way through the night sky from Reno was young and tragic. Wide gray eyes stared dully at a young June moon shining down on fleecy white clouds.

A silvery streak of star shot along the path of the milky way and the girl stirred, sighing. The unearthly beauty was like salt in the wound of her heart, and she closed her eyes and moved her head so that it rested against the back of the seat wearily.

After a time she opened her bag and removed a sheaf of papers to read them again. It was as if she were trying to grasp their meaning.

"AND THIS COURT BY VIRTUE OF THE POWER AND AUTHORITY THEREIN VESTED, AND THE SATUTE IN SUCH CASE MADE AND PROVIDED, DOTH ORDER, ADJUDGE AND DECREE, THAT THE BONDS OF MATRIMONY HERETOFORE EXISTING BETWEEN THE PLAINTIFF, APRIL LIND HILLYER, AND THE DEFENDANT, KENT HILLYER, SR., BE AND THE SAME ARE HEREBY DISSOLVED ACCORDINGLY.

SAMUEL TINNEY, JUDGE."

Just like that! And the same are dissolved accordingly. Six weeks in Reno, a few minutes in a court room, and April no longer belonged to Hill. April, Hill and Kent, Junior, were no longer a family unit. The court had granted full custody of Kenny to his mother.

Small white hands trembled unsteadily as April put the divorce papers back in her bag. The diamonds in her platinum wedding band winked back mockingly and after a little hesitation she twisted the ring from her finger and dropped it into the bag with her decree.

The ring left a deep white circle that looked as though a scar might remain there forever to remind her of the day six years before when Hill had kissed her and placed it there. It was the first time April had ever taken the band from her finger.

Memories flooded her heart with such deep pain that April thought she would surely die. How did people go on living when things like divorce happened to them? Surely they were the people who didn't care. People who wanted to be free to go out and find a new love.

There were the women stopping at the same ranch house in Reno with her for six weeks, for instance. Lillian Mayor who had been there three times to get rid of unwanted husbands, and Alice Hayden who that very morning had screamed with mirth when she told April how she had sold her wedding ring and bought champagne so they could all have a party going back on the train to New York.

That is when April decided she would go mad if she had to travel with the hilarious group who were going to celebrate all the way home. She had slipped away secretly and taken the plane.

April wondered if she were old fashioned and silly because she could see nothing to celebrate about. What was so amusing about making a failure of marriage? Or so funny about a broken home.

Even though it was all over, April still could not believe that she was no longer Hill's wife. She marvelled that she had ever found the courage to go through with a divorce, loving him as she did. What power had driven her on to free Kent Hillyer, when she would rather die than try to live without him?

Now Hill would have to stand on his own feet. It was his only chance to develop the qualities that would help him to be a man. She had taken up the job of spoiling the handsome, loveable playboy where his doting mother had left off. She could no longer endure seeing what they had made of him!

April had married Hill upon her graduation from college in Virginia. The year before Hill had finished school, and a few weeks later became national amateur golf champion. He had been content to sit back on his laurels ever since, even though he held the championship only two years. He had never done a hard days work in his life, except on the golf links.

After Hill played away his own inheritance he had seemed perfectly content when April organized a small music school in Douglaston, Long Islands, where she taught piano and singing to keep them going. Money had always grown on trees, and as far as he was concerned it was still growing there.

Even the birth of Kent, jr., a year after their marriage had seemed to make no impression on Hill's sense of responsibility. April with her endless talent and energy had a genius for making everything go smoothly, and she had done both her own job and Hill's so well that her husband did not realize she was the backbone of the family. Nor did he realize what a struggle she was making to keep them going.

When the day finally came that April awakened to the sickening realization she was turning a man who might have been a success into a failure, she knew what she must do.

As long as she shouldered Hill's burdens for him they would live extravagantly, one jump ahead of bill collectors, surrounded by a crowd of idle people who were doing the same thing. She had come to despise the lazy, childish men and women they called their friends.

After her marriage April's maternal instinct and her deep love for Hill had prompted her to shield him from all annoyance or worry. When the day of reckoning came and she wanted a father for her child who would stand between his family and the world, April could see the mistake she had made. Hill was not a man. He was still a boy.

When April attempted to rectify her mistake, Hill became bitter and accused her of no longer caring for him. A tactful suggestion that he was grown up and should settle down to a serious job and not spend his days on the golf links was like waving a red flag at a bull.

The end of their happiness came almost before either of them realized what was happening. And so April went to Reno.

April seemed unaware of the others in the plane with her, so deeply was she engrossed in her own troubles. Her oval face was so white and tragic as she sat leaning back in her seat that Curt DeWitt, sitting across the aisle became ill-at-ease.

He tried reading a magazine and some letters in his brief case, but found he was unable to concentrate. Curt was a man who made it a strict policy not to pry in another business. But he finally decided something would have to be done about the utter dejection of the lovely lady with the shining straight black hair and wide gray eyes.

He was casting about for an excuse to speak with her when April's heavy hand bag slid from her lap to the floor. Before she could rouse herself to retrieve it, Curt had picked it up and handed it to her.

A small white smile trembled on April's mouth as she thanked him in her soft southern voice. Curt DeWitt took matters into his own hands.

"May I sit with you awhile?" he said. "It gets lonesome up here in the clouds with no one to talk with."

April lacked the courage to refuse, because the stranger's manner was so disarmingly friendly. He looked like a very nice person. But she would much rather have been left to herself.

Curt seated himself beside April. "Do you enjoy flying?" he smiled.

"Very much," she said. "But I seldom get the opportunity."

"Have you flown far this time?" Curt asked.

"From Reno," the girl said significantly, looking down at her hands.

"Oh, I see," DeWitt nodded, understanding.

There was a short silence, then he confided:

"I took the cure there five years ago myself. It isn't a very pleasant experience."

"No it isn't," she sighed heavily.

Curt DeWitt understood only too well what the girl beside him was enduring. Perhaps, he thought, it was even worse for a woman in love.

"I suppose," he said then, "there is little consolation in my telling you that you'll get over the way you feel now. Do you mind if I wax paternal and talk? Or would you rather I just went back to my seat and minded my own business?"

April said politely, but without enthusiasm.

"Not at all."

"Perhaps," the man smiled then, "if I'm going to tell you the story of my life, I'd better introduce myself. He took a card from a case in his pocket which revealed to April that he was Curt DeWitt, president of Sherlock Steel.

"I'm Mrs. Kent Hillyer," April told him then, a little surprised that the attractive, lean jawed stranger was a man of such importance. He seemed much younger than she would have expected a man of his position to be. Certainly not quite forty, with a fine, sensitive face that registered both strength and kindness.

"Your husband was golf champion three or four years ago, wasn't he?" DeWitt asked.

When April nodded he told her he had seen Kent Hillyer play frequently on the links of several clubs to which he belonged, because he lived but a few miles from Douglaston out on the Island.

April had often passed the DeWitt estate. It was the most beautiful home on Long Island, she had always thought. A great white colonial mansion to stir the blood of any woman brought up in the south with acres of gardens and trees overlooking the waters of the sound.

"So we are neighbors," Curt DeWitt smiled his warm charming smile. "That makes it all right for me to take the liberty of giving you a little advice and telling you a bit of my own story, doesn't it?"

"Of course," April made an effort to smile back.

It had been a long time since Curt DeWitt had talked of his marriage and divorce. Although he spoke in the highest terms of the woman who had once been his wife, April could read between the lines that she had been the same sort of fun loving, irresponsible person Kent had always been.

DeWitt had been too busy making good to waste his time playing with her, and so the inevitable had happened. He lived with his daughter Penny, aged twelve. The former Mrs. DeWitt had been married twice in the five years since their divorce, and was living in Hollywood. The father had full custody of his child to whom he was utterly devoted.

As happens very often when two people meet on shipboard, train or plane, Curt and April found themselves exchanging confidences that they would have hesitated to exchange with their oldest friends. Perhaps it was because they discovered they had much in common, and had gone through the same experiences with those they loved.

A little of April's heartbreak eased as she talked with the sympathetic stranger, who seemed suddenly not a stranger at all but someone she had known a long time. Curt DeWitt was happy to see a little of the color return to her lovely face and her eyes lose a little of their dull misery. He was acutely conscious that she was one of the most charming young women he had ever seen in his life.

"Don't look back, my dear," he told April finally. "Close the door and lock it. I wasted years learning how useless it is to let something that can't be avoided destroy happiness. I learned it the hard way. You musn't make the same mistake."

"But how," the girl pressed her cold hands together, "how can you stop loving someone who has been your life for so long? Can you turn love off like a faucet?"

"Perhaps not," the man sighed. "But you're young and very beautiful, and you must force yourself to go out and meet new people and keep busy. Love will come again. You must never shut yourself up and weep over what is past. Do you plan to go to business?"

April told him of her music school and that her old friend Gay Lorraine had joined her to teach dancing. They would live together and a maid would take care of Kenny while she earned a living. Gay had been a professional dancer, and they hoped to make the Hillyer-Lorraine School of Music and Dancing into something worthwhile.

Curt assured her work was a wonderful thing, but that it was even more necessary that she should plunge at once into a new social life.

"I sound like a meddlesome old lady," he said finally, "giving you all this serious advice. But having gone through a marital blitzkrieg myself, I at least can tell you what not to do."

"You've helped a lot," April said with sincerity. "I'm glad you sat with me. It was all bottled up inside before we talked."

The lights of New York were showing in the distance and Curt DeWitt said:

"We're almost home. What do you plan to do when we land?"

"Go home to my child," said April. "I haven't seen him in seven weeks. It's the first time we've ever been separated."

"Won't he be asleep?" Curt asked. "It's ten o'clock. If no one is meeting you, you must let me take you home. Since we're neighbors,"

"That would be very kind of you," April hesitated. "But I'm afraid it would put you to a lot of trouble."

Curt patted her arm. "I'll take you home on one condition. That you'll come out and dance awhile first. Now is as good a time as any to start taking my advice. We'll do the town. What do you say?"

The idea would have seemed fantastic an hour before. But after a moment's thought April said she would go. After all Kenny would be asleep, and if she got tired enough she might get a little rest herself. Certainly there was little point in going home to weep on Gay's shoulder.

THEATERS

Color Spectacle.

An eye-filling Technicolor spectacle that has Florida water sports as part of its panorama, "Moon Over Miami," showing at the Ohio presents Betty Grable, Don Ameche, Caroline Landis and Charlotte Greenwood in some gay moments of song and dance. The action speeds along about as rapidly as the sea sleds raced by the principals during one thrilling sequence of the picture. Briefly the story deals with Betty Grable's efforts to grab a wealthy husband and the exertion her friends go through to help her. Jack Haley, Cobina Wright, jr., and Robert Cummings are in the cast.

Thrilling Drama.

The fight being made by the oppressed peoples of the world to escape dictatorship is depicted in one phase of the battle in "Underground," current thriller at the Madison. Showing how the underground radio is playing a large part in formulating plans to throw off the yoke, the production is threaded with the absorbing story of a totalitarian soldier who sees his beliefs literally shot to pieces. Jeffrey Lynn, Philip Dorn, Mona Maris and Kaaren Verne play the leading roles. "Blondie in Society," the second picture, has Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake.

Western Comedy.

"The Lady From Cheyenne," showing at the Park is Loretta Young's first "western." She doesn't play a gun-totin' daughter of the wide open spaces, however, but a naive Philadelphia school teacher who goes west to seek her fortune. She crosses swords with crooked politicians, headed by Edward Arnold and Robert Preston, and her conflict is paced by a romance that springs up between Preston and herself. Gladys George and Frank Craven are in the cast. Alan Baxter and Mary Carlisle are featured in "Rags To Riches," the second picture.

Triangle Romance.

Mary Astor gives her most dramatic performance in Bette Davis' starring vehicle, "The Great Lie," showing at the Ritz. As a worldly concert pianist she gives a daughter of the south a battle, as the two vie for the affections of George Brent, dare-devil aviator. A cartoon feature, "Raggedy Ann," is shown as the supplementary attraction.

I'VE GOT THE IRON HEATING UP TO PUT MY BRAND ON HIS HIDE!
OKAY, DUSTY BUT YOU'RE ORDERING A BIG PLATTER OF TROUBLE AND GRIEF GRAVY!. ROBIN IS PLENTY TOUGH!
ONE NIGHT IN A CAFE, I SAW HIM TAKE ON TWO BOUNCERS. AND BEING AN OLD TELEGRAPHER, HE BANGED THEIR HEADS TOGETHER, TAPPING OUT IN MORSE, "TWO HEADS ARE BETTER THAN ONE"!

FRAGMENT IN FOOT 38 YEARS

GOSHEN, Ind — (U P) — Thirty-eight years ago in Greece, John Economos stepped on a piece of glass. His mother stopped the bleeding, the puncture healed, and the boy forgot about it.

The incident was brought to life again, however, when a Goshen physician, probing an infected foot, removed a piece of glass within an inch of Economos' old scar. Economos believes it to be the same piece of glass he stepped on 38 years ago.

STEELS HOLD MARKET BACK ON RECOVERY

Further Government Control Feared; Scrap Shortage Considered Grave.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Recovery tendencies appeared here and there in today's stock market but a lower drift in steels served as a handicap for bidders.

Aside from scant optimism over international affairs, the institution of full priorities on iron and steels by the O. P. M over the week-end helped maintain speculative conservatism, brokers said.

Expectations of further widening of governmental controls, in addition to persistent labor disputes, it was suggested, provided handicaps. Some buying was thought to have come in on the idea the market may have reached an over-sold condition.

Market followers noted the survey of the magazine "Steel" which stressed scrap shortage as "the gravest factor in reference to the steel supply."

"Efforts are being made to organize a scrap collection campaign," the review added, "somewhat similar to the recent aluminum drive; large quantities are known to exist and it is believed considerable tonnage could be brought to market simply by making the public scrap-conscious."
